THE HOUSEKEEPER'S TRAGEDY.

One day, as I wandered, I heard a complaining,
And saw a poor woman, the picture of gloom;
She glared at the mud on her door-step ('twas raining),
And this was her wail as she wielded her broom:

"Oh! life is a toil, and love is a trouble,
And beauty will fade, and riches will flee,
And pleasures they dwindle, and prices they double,
And nothing is what I could wish it to be.

"There's too much of worriment goes to a bonnet;
There's too much of ironing goes to a shirt;
There's nothing that pays for the time you waste on it;
There's nothing that lasts us but trouble and dirt.

"In March it is mud; it's slush in December;
The midsummer breezes are loaded with dust;
In fall the leaves litter; in muggy September
The wall-paper rots and the candle-sticks rust.

"There are worms in the cherries, and slugs in the roses,
And ants in the sugar, and mice in the pies.
The rubbish of spiders no mortal supposes,
And ravaging roaches, and damaging flies.

"It's sweeping at six, and it's dusting at seven;
It's victuals at eight, and it's dishes at nine;
It's potting and panning from ten to eleven;
We scarce break our fast ere we plan how to dine.

"With grease and with grime, from corner to center,
Forever at war, and forever alert,
No rest for a day, lest the enemy enter—
I spend my whole life in a struggle with dirt.

"Last night, in my dream, I was stationed forever
On a little bare isle in the midst of the sea;
My one chance of life was a ceaseless endeavor
To sweep off the waves ere they swept off poor me,

"Alas! 'twas no dream—again I behold it!
I yield; I am helpless my fate to avert."
She rolled down her sleeves; her apron she folded;
Then lay down and died, and was buried in dirt.

DR. GALL AND THE PRINCE.

FROM THE GERMAN.

The occasion was one of those private balls in Vienna, such as could be given only by Prince Metternich, that great statesman, who, fifty years ago, had reached the pinnacle of power, and ruled with subtle hand the destinies of Europe. At this festival there were assembled all the noble and distinguished personages then clustering around the throne of Hapsburg. All the ambassadors and plenipotentiaries of the European nations, the celebrities of the court of Vienna, the nobility of the empire, clad in dazzling uniforms and decorated with brilliant orders, thronged the spacious saloons—A small army of belles, blooming with grace and beauty, and glittering with jewels, shone like of the first order amid the assembly; and of them all the beautiful Princess de T——, thro' whom the artful diplomatic host had secured the good graces of the gallant Emperor Alexander of Russia, bore the palm of loveliness. It is well known how many diplomatic combinations have been brought about by the esprit of beautiful woman, and by their adroitness in intrigue. Among the gentlemen guests assembled in the gay saloons, there was only one who, like the Princess de T——, commanded in such high degree the attention of the company. He was Count P—— to whose high position, wealth, handsome exterior, and irresistible courtesy this attention had soon been conceded. Only a few days before he had arrived at Vienna from his estates in Bohemia, and had presented himself to the Emperor, his feudal chief.—Metternich's keen eye sought in this young man a clever tool, to whom an important part in the diplomatic drama of the world might be assigned.

While the company promenaded with easy elegance in the gay saloons, two men, half hidden by the massive portieres, stood in a niche, engaged in lively conversation. One of them was of a supple figure, not over forty, showing a high degree of refinement in his whole bearing—his broad forehead indicating high culture and intellectual discernment, with a slightly curved nose, large blue eyes, and a little firm mouth. This was Prince Metternich, the all powerful. Always master of himself, he knew how to turn to the best account for Austria the weaknesses of the great, and this so dexterously that, those whom he had selected as his victims could not abstain from following magnetically his will. Where no motives of statesmanship were involved, the great diplomatist appeared as the most amiable, accessible man of the world, and even not devoid of generous emotions. So he appeared just now toward his companion, with whom he was conversing.—This was a man apparently nearly 60, but elastic with the vigor and spirit of a much younger age. The high, bald forehead, the quick eye, the marked features, full of expression, signified the deep thinker and sharp observer. This was Francis Joseph Gall, the celebrated physiologist, and whose "doctrine of the brain," after his lectures about it had been prohibited at first at Vienna, at that time again belonged to the allowed topics of conversation with the beau monde of Vienna, and made him the most consulted scientific medical man of the imperial city.

We hear what seems to be the end of a conversation.

"Then you share the general opinion, Doctor," Metternich asked with a smile, "that Princess S——is an admirable lady?"

"Perfectly."

"The looks of the charming lady, and the expression of her face indicate a desire to venture in that field," Gall replied, letting his eye rest on the subject of their conversation; "but I may not mistake if I presume to say that she lacks perseverance and the penetrating order of mind which is necessary to bring to a victorious end what she may commence with the best spirit."

"So, so!" smiled Metternich, a little doubtfully. "You, however, with your infallible gift of prophecy, indeed ought to know. But how do you judge that splendid young man, Count P——? In a fortnight, since he entered the circle of our society, he has conquered the hearts of all our ladies. I do not blame the fair ones' for it, when even the men—myself not excluded—are attracted by his genuine chivalry and manly grace, combined in a rare manner with the profoundest knowledge. The Emperor intends attaching him to the court by marriage. I prophesy a brilliant future to the young man. Eh, what do you say to it, my dear Doctor?"

"I only saw him passing by," Gall replied; "he really possesses all the external qualities which your highness has been kind enough to mention to me; but nevertheless——"

"I could have imagined," the Prince laughingly interrupted him, "that you on the strength of your system, would only conditionally grant the correctness of my opinion. But at least do not apply too hurriedly your system to him."

"My system is founded on keen and long observations only, and I have not yet had a sufficient opportunity for them. I only beg to remark that my system adheres to the principle, that a beautiful outside does not always warrant good and excellent inner qualities."

"Concerning the Count, I believe myself to be so little mistaken about him, that I leave him unconditionally to your examination. Analyze his features, touch and feel the bumps or 'protuberances' of his brain, as you please, and I am sure you will arrive at the conclusion that there never was a finer soul in a more beautiful body."

"Perhaps——" began Gall, when a valet of the Prince respectfully approached him and announced that just now a courier had arrived who would deliver his despatches to his highness. With only the words, "I shall be back soon," Metternich left the physician to give his attention to official duties for a short time in his study.

Gall, remaining alone, nodded his head wonderingly over the almost vehement patronage which Count P—— enjoyed, not only from the powerful diplomatist, but also from the court and its numerous planets. He now began, during the festival, unobservedly but closely to scrutinize the "favorite of fortune," and to penetrate, as it were, "the spiritual soundings" of his system, to the Count's inner heart.

Count P——had just danced a mazurka with the charming Princess Z—and that with an elegance in which grace and boldness of movement were combined. Ladies and gentlemen gave vent to their admiration of the excellent dancer, when the observing physician was slightly tapped on the shoulder. It was the Prince, who, returned from his study, again conducted the doctor into his conversational niche.

"Have you now, Doctor, subjected the young Count to a closer observation, and convinced yourself that he is a—perfect creature?

Gall stepped nearer to the Prince, and after having looked around as if to assure himself that there was nobody listening, whispered resolutely into his ear: "Your perfect creature my Prince, is nothing more than a—'perfect villain.'"

"By all the saints, Doctor!" the Prince replied, with a forced smile, which could not quite cover his bad humor, "you seem to be strangely disposed to joking to-day, or your otherwise very esteemed system has got a hole!"

"Your highness would perhaps have no leisure to listen to my arguments," Gall replied, bowing gravely; but time will show which of us has been mistaken—you, my Prince, or I."

A few years afterward a ghastly, unheard of crime threw not only Germany, but the whole of Europe, into terror. A criminal of high standing, brought to trial, was sentenced to lose his title and honors, and then to be beheaded. The sentence was executed.

The criminal was the amiable, elegant Count P——, the favorite of Metternich and the nobility of Austria.

Not long after that time Prince Metternich visited Dr. Gall at Paris, where he had removed, and where, in 1828, he died at his country seat in Montrouge, near the French capital. When the Prince entered the room of the savant, a young man left it with the easy, elegant manners of a man of the world."

"Who was that nice young man who just left?" the Prince asked.

"A Russian—a M. de R——, He studies medicine here for his pleasure; but, besides, he seems to be an ardent politician," Gall replied.

"I must confess that seldom a young man made, by his exterior, such a favorable impression upon me as that one," remarked Metternich.

"Your highness's kindness is too well known to me," the physician replied, "to surprise me with regard to this stranger. I however, venture to remind your highness only of Count P——," Gall added, with slightest malace.

"I remember him," the Prince said, with a sweet-sour face. "I deceived myself then. As regards M. de——, I do not believe I have to fear that. His face shows the expression of a decided man."

"I should assert," the phrenologist corrected him, "that his face bears the most marked stamp of a cruel Siberian bear. Count P—— was a mad-man, whom the absolute deficiency of an organ for tender feeling made cruel.—But this Russian is a wild animal by instinct. I believe he will meet a fate not less repulsive than the other."

A few years afterward M. de R——, arrested for conspiring against the life of the Russian Emperor, was sentenced to be hung.

Blessings ever wait on virtuous deeds—Congreve.

A GOOD JOKE.—The "local" of the Pittsburgh Commercial gets off the following:

That standard, reliable, safe, noncommittal and at present very vexatious subject, the weather, was the starting point for a whimsical scene we witnessed the other day in a German store not a hundred miles from the Seventh ward. That the reader may understand the story fully, we will state that the predominant element of the ward is Teutonic, and the opaque to sheer absurbity where a joke is involved. The proprietor was busy over his saw and knife, when enter a woman dripping with rain, with the remark in German, "It is very wet." No reply. The proprietor had his customers to attend to. Directly afterwards an elderly man, tent with age, and struggling to manage a cane, umbrella and basket at the same time, entered with the words "It is very wet." The butcher looked up, glowered and bent to his work again, deigning no reply. Five customers stood in a row. Directly he would be prepared to fill their orders. A poor, miserable looking wretch, almost dwarfish in appearance, with a head admirably calculated to play "snook" in the mountain scene in "Rip Van Winkle," (evidently not a customer,) stumbled into the store, and nodding towards the door said "Good day, Mr. ——. It is very wet to day." Whatever had come over the butcher no one could tell. He sawed the bones violently; he slashed instead of cutting the meat. Lastly, the driver of a team, a big burly man, with a nose like a door-knob, only with more of a shine to it than door-knobs boast in wet weather, suddenly pulled up in front of the store, and springing from his seat, entered, shaking himself like a spaniel. For a wonder his voice had a Hibernian sound: "I'm sayin', that's a wet day. Suddenly the butcher laid down his knife, and staring at the last comer, burst out with, "Dat's wat you all say; 'It is a vet tay'—a vet day. Don't I know dat it is a vet day? Tunder and vesser! You all must tink I po a fool dat you can't say nothings else dan dat. Mine vrau, she leafe de vinder open, and dor raigen coomed inder mine bet-room, down on dor bet. Den mine little poy, he fell inder Stiefel's cellar und nearly got drowned, und dat fool Shake gets drunk dis vedder, stead of helpin' me, and here I po vet droo und droo, and now you all coome in und tell me it is a vet day. Tunder und vesser! I never see such foolish peoples. Don't I know it is vet? We thought he did.

How to be Miserable.

Sit by a window and look over the way to your neighbor's excellent mansion, which he has recently built and paid for and fitted out, and say: "Oh, that I were a rich man!"

Get angry with your neighbor, and think you have not a friend in the world. Shed a tear or two, and take a walk in the burial ground, continually saying to yourself: "When shall I be buried here?"

Sign a note for a friend, and never forget your kindness, and every hour in the day whisper to yourself: "I wonder if he will ever pay that note?"

Think everybody means to cheat you Closely examine every bill you take, and doubt its being genuine until you have put your neighbor to a great deal of trouble. Put confidence in nobody, and believe every man you trade with to be a rogue.

Never accommodate, if you can possibly help it.

Never visit the sick, or afflicted, and never give a cent to assist the poor.

Buy as cheap as you can, and screw down to the lowest mill. Grind the faces and the hearts of the unfortunate.

Brood over your misfortunes, your lack of talents, and believe that at no distant day you will come to want.—Let the work house be ever in your mind, with all the horrors of distress and poverty.

Follow these recipes strictly, and you will be miserable to your heart's content—if we may so speak—sick at heart, and at variance with the world. Nothing will throw a gleam of sunshine or a ray of warmth into your heart.

SIMPLICITY IS BEAUTY.—The late Fitz Greene Halleck said: "A letter fell into my hands which a Scotch servant girl had written to her lover. Its style charmed me. It was fairly inimitable. I wondered how, in her circumstances in life, she could have acquired so elegant a style. I showed the letter to some of my literary friends in the city of New York, and they unanimously agreed that it was a model of beauty and elegance. I then determined to solve the mystery, and I went to the house where she was employed, and asked how it was that, in her humble circumstances in life, she had acquired a style so beautiful that the most cultivated minds could not but admire it. 'Sir,' said she, 'I came to this country four years ago. Then I could not read or write. But since then I have learned to read and write, but I have not yet learned to spell; so always when I sit down to write a letter, I select those words which are so short and simple that I am sure to know how to spell them.' There was the whole secret. The reply of that simple-minded Scotch girl condensed a world of rhetoric into a nut shell.—Simplicity is beauty—simplicity is power."

☞ Buffalo girls are very saucy.—"May I see you home?" enquired a lad of a lass at church. "You may see me anywhere you like, but you can't walk with me," was the pert response.

Virtue is her own reward—Prior.

Thrilling Scene on Tight Rope.

An English paper thus details a thrilling affair which occurred during one of Blondin's recent exhibitions:

After he had crossed in a sack stood on a chair, and had done some of his minor feats, it was found that the rope, which was a new one, had slackened so considerably that it would be necessary to tighten it, in order to allow of his performing his new and extraordinary feat of crossing it on a bicycle, and he was, therefore, compelled to appeal to the audience for time to tighten the rope. Half an hour was asked for and cheerfully granted, but, after the guy ropes had been loosened and the rope tightened up, some difficulty was found in refixing the pole to which the guys were attached, in consequence of the tension of the rope havig dragged them forcibly out of the ground. Quite three quarters of an hour elapsed before this was done, and then Blondin appeared again, and starting from the west end of the building carried his assistant over on his back. It was evident, from the lowering of some ballast bags on the guy poles, that during this passage across, the rope slackened a good deal, but Blondin either did not observe this or did not think it important, for after a short interval, during which he changed his dress, he appeared on his bicycle, and amid the cheers of the spectators started on what seemed an awful perilous journey. He had not gone far when it became apparent from the decline of the rope that it had slackened very much, and people who understood the nature of bicycles and the impossibility of propelling them up hill began to calculate the probabilities of his getting the incline he must inevitably meet at the other end of the rope, but Blondin looked extremely cool and confident, and no fears for his safety seemed to be entertained till, after stopping cleverly about midway, he began to traverse the incline. It then became apparent, from the gradual slacking of his speed, that he was doing some hard work, and murmurs began to rise from the audience. When about twenty yards from the landing stage he came to a dead stop and appeared to rest, ballancing himself cautiously with a great pole he carried. He then made another effort and got a few yards further, when he stoped again. It then became apparent that he could not get further, as, although to the danger of disturbing his equilibrium, he tried to jerk the machine forward, it refused to move.

The scene that then ensued was most exciting. People left their seats; ladies, with frightened faces, made for the doors, and the general mass of the people at the east end of the building made a rush to the west end, hundreds jumping into the arena. When the rush and noise had subsided, a marvellous stillness succeeded. The crowds on the floor beneath the rope, and in the galleries nearest the spot, seemed to be hushed in eager expectation of something unpleasant, some gazing with horror-stricken faces on the performer, who sat motionless as a statue on the rope, about six yards from the landing-place, while his assistant leaned over the stage and appeared to be speaking to him, but looked helpless in the emergency. After the delay of two or three minutes, which seemed an age, the assistant, evidently by Blondin's directions, procured a rope, and this he threw out cautiously. It fell on the performer's shoulders, and he, with some difficulty, sustained the pole with one hand, while with the other he tied the rope round his wrist. The assistant then gently pulled him in. Every move of the wheels was watched by the audience in silent horror till the machine ran on the landing stage, when the suppressed excitement culminated in one great shout of joy, succeeded by the wildest demonstrations.

TAMING SPIDERS.—How easily spiders are made to know the voice of their master, is familiar to all, from many a sad prisoner's tale. When the great and brilliant Lauzun was held in captivity, his only joy and comfort was a friendly spider; she came at his call; she took her food from his finger, and well understood his word of command. In vain did jailers and soilders try to decosve his tiny companion; she would not obey their voices, and refused the tempting bait from their hads. Here, then, was not only an ear, but a keen power of distinction. The despised little animal listened with sweet affection, and knew how to discriminate between not unsimilar tones! So it was with the friend of the patriot Quartemore d' Ijonville, who paid with captivity for the too ardent love of his country. He also had tamed spiders, and taught them to come at his call. But the little creatures were not only useful to him, but to the nation to which he belonged; for, when the French invaded Holland, the prisoners managed to send them a message that the inundated and now impassable country would soon be frozen over, so that they would be able to march over the ice-bridged swamps and lakes; for spiders, true barometers as they are, had taught him to read, in their queer habits, the signs of approaching winter. The frost came, and with it the French; Holland was taken, and the lucky prophet set free. The sdipors, alas! were forgotten.

TRUTH.—We must not always speak all we know—that were folly; but what a man says should be what he thinks, otherwise it is knavery. All a man can get by lying and dissembling is that he shall not be believed when he speaks the truth.—Montaigne.

The Young Wife's Secret.

"Now, Eliza, after such a delightful week wedding holiday as we have had, would it not be a good time to tell me your secret?"

A young and happy looking couple seated at breakfast, on the morning after their short honeymoon trip, when this question was asked.

"A better time dear James, could not be chosen, but would you really like to hear it now?"

"Why not? The sooner we begin to act upon it the better."

"This is true, James, but would you not prefer to find it out for yourself?"

"Oh! I have been trying to guess ever since you first told me of it. Perhaps, Eliza, it is no secret after all?"

"I assure you that it is, and a most valuable one, too."

"Is it much known?"

"Well, dear, I can hardly say; but judging from appearances, I should think not."

"How came you to know?"

"I learned it from my mother, she often told me that all happiness was owing to it. Were she alive now she would witness its effect to us."

"You quite puzzle me, Eliza; it must be something extraordinary, if, as you say, it prevents man and wife ever having a second quarrel. You may as well tell me at once."

"I am quite ready to tell you, James; but I am sure that your pleasure will be greater in finding it out yourself.—Fortune favors the persevering."

"Ah, I know now; you mean that we are to count a hundred; or fill our mouth with water; or twirl a chain, or some such way of getting cool when we happen to get angry."

"No; James, none of these; it is much more certain, attended with better effects."

"Perhaps you mean that we should shut ourselves up in different rooms, or not speak to one another for a week?"

"No, dear James, none so cruel as that. Heaven forbid that we should ever be driven to such extremities.—By persevering in my secret, we shall love one another as truly as we do now. Our trust in one another will increase, and the longer we live the happier we shall be. You will very likely say that it is no secret after all, now that I tell you; the surest way to avoid a second quarrel is never to have a first!"

"Capital!" exclaimed James, laughing; "I will stick to that with all my heart." He would have liked to prolong the conversation, but the wedding holiday was over, and he wished to be punctual at work. So taking up his hat, he imprinted a good-by kiss on his wife's rosy lips, resolving, as he went out, to put her secret into practice.

"KEEP HIM DOWN."—When a poor man attempts to rise—attempts to show that there is no monopoly of genius, and that God has given as free and noble a soul to the lowly as to the great—he is not only opposed by the class above him, but envy and scorn are but too often his portion among his fellows. They do not like to see themselves outstripped by one whom they have reckoned no better than themselves, and instead of encouraging, they damp his ardor and grieve his heart with sneers, and cold, because envious, counsel. The next class above love not to see a man who has naught to boast of but a noble soul, no treasures save those of mind, presuming to take his place among them; and there is one universal shout of "Keep him down!" This upward struggle which the poverty struck genius has to endure—the struggle against prejudice and misrepresentation and want—has daunted many a mind, and discouraged many a breast; and has kept many a man formed to be a light to the world in poverty and darkness to the end of his days. Because of this many a noble spirit has concealed its own flame of brightness; many noble and free men, of whom the world was not worthy, have gone down into the grave with all the wisdom of their souls untold—have died, and made no sign.

A LOVELY INCIDENT.—We recently heard the following most touching incident: A little boy died. His body was laid out in a darkened, retired room, waiting to be laid away in the lone, cold grave. His afflicted mother and bereaved sister went in to look at the sweet face of the precious sleeper; for his face was beautiful even in death. As they stood gazing upon the form of one so beloved and cherished, the little girl asked to take his hand. The mother at first did not think it best, but as the child repeated the request, and seemed very anxious about it, she took the cold bloodless hand of the sleeping boy, and placed it in the hands of the weeping sister. The dear child held it a moment, caressed it fondly, and then looked up at her mother through her tears of affection and love, and said: "Mother this little hand never struck me!" What could be more touching and lovely? Young readers, have you always been so gentle to brothers and sisters that, were you to die, such a tribute as this could be paid to your memory? Could a brother or sister take your hand, were it cold in death, and say: This hand never struck me!"

☞ An important legal decision has just been given in West Chester, this State. A man named Walker left an umbrella in his wagon, and on returning to it a few minutes after found the umbrella had disappeared. On his way home he overtook one named Morris in a heavy rain, with the umbrella. After hearing the case, the Court sentenced Morris to one months' imprisonment, the costs and a fine of $1. It is thus judiciously determined that umbrellas are property.

Is there any good reason why the Congressional Globe should not share the same fate as our own dear Legislative Record?

Cuba is not yet officially recognized by any nation but Spain, which is continually blowing hot shot among its stubborn subjects.

In the Senate, on Monday, Senator Scott presented a petition for the abolition of the franking privilege measuring thirty-six feet in length.

Alaska, as a part of the United States, didn't pay well. After collecting customs from different sources, the excess of disbursements was $517,939.

Some printer at the Harrisburg printers' banquet recently, got off the following pun: "Our Commonwealth is the Great Primer from which other States take lessons."

The income tax, instead of being abolished is merely to be reduced.—That is a crumb of comfort, at least to those who have more money than they know what to do with.

The Findlay-Scull contested election case, for the 20th Senatorial District in this State, was finally decided on Friday last in favor of the Democratic sitting member, Mr. Findlay.

The Mormon legislature has passed a bill allowing the women of Utah to vote. Whenever the question of polygamy or no polygamy comes up won't there be some sisterly voting?

Paris, which is France in a very large nutshell, is excited over a newly discovered plot against the life of the Emperor. Thirty-five persons were arrested on suspicion of being concerned in it. The Napoleons die nasty.

One of the effects of the XVth Amendment is to give 900,000 negroes a vote. Of these only 100,000 are in North Carolina. If they concentrate, will have many things pretty much their own way, down South.

Investigation is now the order of the day from Washington all round to the Pacific. Congress has "gold" and "gadotships" to deal with; our Legislature is smelling for corruption in the Treasurership and the Metropolitan Bill.

Capt. Hall, the arctic explorer, wants the assistance of the government to send him to the North Pole. We think he ought to get all he asks, as there is a fair prospect of us buying that as well as Alaska! Alas that it is so.

It appears that the claims on file in the Auditor General's office, for damages from the rebel raid, amount to about two million dollars. While we think our neighbors should be paid, we hope the Legislature will not throw money away rashly.

Virginia, Georgia and Mississippi, which have been out in the cold so long, were formally admitted into the Sisterhood of States on the 20th inst. We hope the three sisters will be good girls and not court Mother England or Nappy France any more.

In Logan, Ohio, the Democracy have selected colored men as candidates for County Auditor, City Marshal, and Councilman. Would any wise Democrats hereaway be after telling us what their brothers in Ohio mean by throwing soft-soap at the poor darkey?

A bill intended for the relief of Dr. Scoppa allowing the Supreme Court to receive evidence in criminal cases on appeal, and which was vetoed by the Governor, passed both Houses on Tuesday last by the requisite two-thirds. Thus the Doctor has another chance for life.

The Patent office, at Washington, according to the report of the Commissioner, received twenty thousand applications for patents during the past year, and on the first of January found itself with all expenses paid and a balance of half a million dollars in the treasury.

Two thousand cellars are occupied as dwellings in New York. The deeper the cellar and the less light and ventilation there is, the more families there are living together.—What deplorable state of affairs! Why don't the New Yorkers get up a grand immigration scheme and furnish the cellarites transportation to a western home?

Gov. Geary is the target for Democratic paper bullets for making the remark that he couldn't dance because his legs were too full of bulletholes. If those heroic stay-at-home fellows could only say as much for themselves it would be vastly more to their credit, and they would show their good sense by not abusing scores of other good Union soldiers who met with a similar misfortune.

Since the assembling of the Ecumenical Council seven of its members have died and four have left Rome.

Pennsylvania Railroad Report.

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Penn'a. Railroad Co., occurred on Tuesday last in Phadelphia. From the President's report we extract the following, as having special interest to this region:

"Upon the main line of your railway and its branches, the movement of anthracite coal is yet inconsiderable, whilst the transportation of the bituminous has been large for the manufacture of gas for Eastern cities and the other purposes already mentioned. This material exists in inexhaustible quantities along the whole line of your railway from the summit of the Allegheny to its western terminus, and in the Broad Top Mountain (already extensively developed) south of Huntingdon. A branch from the main line at Tyrone to the town of Clearfield cuts the Allegheny coalfield, and upon this mining is now carried on to a large extent, whilst another branch also extends from the same point to Lock Haven on the Susquehanna river. From Altoona a branch extends to Hollidaysburg and Newry, a distance of nine miles. The last two mentioned, in connection with a portion of the main line, traverse the valley at the base of the Allegheny Mountains for seventy miles, commencing on the West branch of the Susquehanna river, and afford ample opportunities to develop this whole region by short branch lines into the coal fields at their summit wherever desired. In this valley and in the mountains and valleys that lie on its eastern border, there is an abundance of ore easily mined and of a quality that will make the best quality of iron—already celebrated for its strength, and found superior to any other in the manufacture of cannon. The proximity of these ores to coal and limestone gives to this region advantages for the manufacture of iron in all its varieties and uses, a claim equal if not superior to that of any other—which advantages will doubtless be improved by capitalists, and thus largely increase the population upon your line and its local traffic—the most reliable.

"The canal is nominally owned by a distinct company, the Railroad controlling it as the principal owner of its stock. The following extract refers briefly to it:

"The interest held by this company in the Pennsylvania Canal Company is steadily improving in value, and when the enlargement is complete it will become a profitable addition to your investments in other works. Its cost stands upon your books at $1,101,156.

"The coal traffic of this company is gradually assuming large proportions, and already gives to your railway a constant business at rates that yield a very small profit per ton; but on the large amount transported (2,329,358 tons) the net revenue from it is of considerable importance.

"The policy of the Company in regard to local freight is thus spoken of:

"There has been much complaint by the public in consequence of the higher charges made by many railway companies for short than long distances. In this policy, to a limited degree, these companies for obvious reasons are fully justified; but in many cases this practice has been carried to an unwarrantable extent. The rule that has governed this company is, not to charge to any intermediate point a greater rate than is required to one at a larger distance. Under this rule, which we think entirely defensible, the average charges for the through and local business per ton per mile passing over your line are nearly equal.

"The Pennsylvania Railroad Company was organized mainly with a view to promote the commercial and manufacturing interests of the city of Philadelphia and the interior of the State, and its management has kept these objects steadily in view.

☞ The 15th Amendment for the benefit of negroes having passed, it is thought that the next thing will be the 16th amendment for the benefit of women. However, one lady writes to the New York Tribune that if such an amendment is passed without being first submitted to the people it will be an outrage, and adds: "The small, dissatified minority have not the shadow of a right to force upon us a measure which the most of us heartily and earnestly detest. If the men will only stand faithful, and firmly refuse to let us be dragged into a work for which we are wholly unfitted by nature, education, and tastes, the blessing of the majority of the 'fair sex' will rest upon them."

☞ There was a meeting held in Petersburg, Va., the other day, to nominate a candidate for Judge, and among those present was one of Lee's veterans. The meeting was a large one, and it was found necessary to make the voters stand in line to count them. The line being somewhat irregular, one of the tellers cried out "right dress," whereupon our veteran exclaimed, "Look here, Mister, if you are going to start another war you must count me out. I've had enough of that sort of thing," and with a spring to the rear, he made double quick time away for his home, and thus one vote was lost.

The startling intelligence comes from California that there is a secret oath bound organization in existence in that State, whose object is to exterminate the Chinese. As there are 80,500 of these Chinese rats on the Pacific border, their extermination will be as big a job as whipping the rebels in three months.

The Bible in Common Schools.

The Catholics in Cincinnati, as well as in other parts of the United States, have been trying to have the Bible excluded from the public schools of that city. On Tuesday last, Judges Hagan and Storer, of the Superior Court delivered their opinion and decision, on an application to dissolve an injunction heretofore granted to restrain the operation of resolutions of the School Board, declaring that the reading of the Bible and religious exercises should not be permitted in the Schools. Judge Hagan held that the provisions of the Constitution recognize the religion of Christianity and acknowledge that religion and morality are necessary to good government; that the State uses religion as a means to promote good government, and therefore the exclusion of all religious instruction from the public schools is contrary to the provisions of the Bill of Rights. Judge Storer concurred in these views, and the injunction was made perpetual.

Judge Taft dissented and held that the Board had acted within its legal power. At the conclusion of his opinion, he maintained that "the Board of Education have simply aimed to free the common schools from any just conscientious objection by confining them to secular instructions and moral and intellectual training. Under the circumstances, it was not only just, but, under the Constitution of Ohio, a duty which they could not omit without violating the rights of those who conscientiously object to the practice under the old rule of the Board."

The counsel for the defendant say they will carry the case to the Supreme Court.

The President's views of Taxation.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Two members of the Ways and Means Committee had some talk last evening with the President, and the remarks made were to be reported to the full committee. He said that last fall he was of opinion that we would do better to go on rapidly as possible in buying up and cancelling our bonds, so as to reduce our debt, and in this view had recommended that we hold our tax and tariff rates generally at the present figures, so as to have a large surplus for use by the Secretary of the Treasury in cutting down the indebtedness. He had thought a good deal about this matter, he continued, and had somewhat changed his opinions as to the policy that should be pursued. He was satisfied that it would be better for the country to have a reduction of taxation, that the people were anxious for it, and that Congress could not well do less than meet this expectation. In his opinion we might make a reduction of twenty millions in the receipts from internal revenue, and he would very readily sign bills looking to such a reduction if passed by Congress. Something was said about the Funding bill now before the Senate, and he remarked that he himself was not so confident as some persons seem to be that we can negotiate a par loan at four and a half or five per cent. interest. It might be well to pass the bill, but he doubted if we could do much under it this year.

HURRYGRAPHS.

Miss Susan B. Anthony celebrated her semi-centenary last Tuesday evening. She is a jolly old maid of fifty years, and seems to feel proud of it.

India-rubber waterproofs have been supplanted by an article called Scottish Tweed, which can be made impervious to rain.

A bill has been introduced in the Ohio House of Representatives prohibiting the reading of the Bible or singing hymns or psalms in public schools.

A cement, made by dissolving rubber cut fine in benzene may be used to mend rubber boots and shoes. This cement will firmly fasten on a rubber patch.

Senator Hamlin being requested to frank some letters, received them, placed a three cent stamp on each and returned them to the persons who sent them.

There is a drout in the southern portion of California. The cattle in Tulare and Santa Barbara counties are dying, and new settlers are seeking other locations. Without liberal rains immense loss must result to stock and farming interests in that section.

The numerous deluded "American heirs" to English estates, who are constantly being fleeced by lawyers would save their money if they were aware that an alien cannot be an heir in England, where there is no will, and that he cannot take real estate even if left to him by will.

In consequence of the arrest of M. Rochefort, his partisans barricaded several streets in Paris, pillaged various armories, and repulsed a body of the police; but were at length overborne by the military. For a while a revolution was imminent, but quiet has been restored, and no serious outbreak is anticipated.

A Monroe, Michigan, miss of 57, sued an old chap of 20 for breach of promise, he having promised to marry her for a suit of clothes which she provided, when he repudiated. The suit of clothes failed, but the suit at law brought him up standing, at the altar, and the contest between Cupid and cupidity came to suitable clothes.

The last span of the Ohio river bridge at Cincinnati was recently completed. The length of the bridge, exclusive of approaches, is one mile. It has two main spans of three hundred and seventy feet, and another of four hundred feet, and a draw over the channel. The time occupied in its construction was two years and a half. It will be ready for the passage of trains in three or four days.

A petition was recently circulated in Westmoreland county, praying the court to grant that a new bridge be built over Sewickly creek. The Court granted the order and put three quarters of the expense on the county, and the other quarter on the petitioners, $6.75 each, who now think it does not pay to sign petitions.

Another Earthquake in California.

San Francisco, Feb. 17.—Another earthquake visited this city to-day, causing the hotels and buildings to be vacated instantly. The streets were filled with people before the shock had hardly ceased. Fortunately it occurred about the time of recess in the public schools, and many of the children were out in the yards playing.—In the schools which were in session the teachers managed to keep the children under control, although in one of the schools the young misses created quite a panic.

The Custom House was uninjured, but was soon emptied of its occupants. The cracks made by the October shock in some of the older buildings were widened a little, but no material damage was sustained.

Funeral services were being held in the Washington Street Baptist Church and there was a large attendance. At the first tremble the pastor and congregation rushed for the doors; several ladies fainted, but no one was seriously injured. The old frame buildings on the wharves swayed and cracked, but the waters in the bay showed no unusual commotion. The shock was quite heavy at Petalnma, causing the people to vacate the brick buildings.

The weather was clear and warm at the time of the shock. It is raining this evening.

ROSADALIS

The Great American Health Restorer! purifies the blood and cures Scrofula, Syphilis, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Diseases of Women and all Chronic Affections of the Blood, Liver, and Kidneys. Recommended by the Medical Faculty and thousand of our best citizens.

Read the testimony of physicians and patients who have used Rosadalis. Send for our Rosadalis Guide to Health or Almanac for this year, which we publish for gratuitous distribution. It will give you much valuable information.

Dr. R. W. Carr, of Baltimore says:

I take pleasure in recommending your Rosadalis as a safe, sure powerful alterative. I have seen it used in two cases with happy results—one in case of secondary syphilis, in which the patient pronounced himself cured after having taken five bottles of your medicine. The other is a case of scrofula of long standing; which is rapidly improving under its use, and the indications are that the patient will soon recover. I have carefully examined the formula by which your Rosadalis is made, and find it an excellent compound of all alterative ingredients.

Dr. Sparks, of Nicholasville, Ky., says he has used Rosadalis in cases of scrofula and secondary Syphilis with satisfactory results—as a cleaner of the blood I know of no better remedy.

Samuel G. McFadden, Murfreesboro', Tennessee, says:

I have used seven bottles of Rosadalis, and am entirely cured of rheumatism; send me four bottles, as I wish it for my brother, who has scrofulous sore eyes.

Benjamin Bechtol, of Lima, Ohio, writes, I have suffered for twenty years with an inveterate eruption over my body; a short time since I purchased a bottle of Rosadalis and it effected a perfect cure.

Rosadalis is sold by John Read and S. S. Smith, Huntingdon, Pa., and Druggists generally.

Bible Presentation.

The Altoona Sun gives the following particulars of the presentation of a $25 Bible to Altoona Division, No. 44, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and as the names of those who took part in the ceremony are familiar to many of our readers, we publish it for their benefit.:

Arrangements for the presentation ceremonies having been completed the members of the Order proceeded to the lodge room, Masonic Temple building, accompanied by quite a large delegation of ladies, who in this case, as ever, were proud to assist in accomplishing successfully a good and noble work. And the ladies did not come empty-handed; for with their usual thoughtfulness they brought with them a general assortment of things both palatable and substantial.

The organization of the meeting was effected by the election of Mr. Johnson, president, Wm Stimer, Secretary, and a number of vice presidents. Due time having elapsed, W. A. Leonard of Huntingdon, a member of the Order, and brother-in-law of the fair donors, Miss Jennie Campbell, of Huntingdon and Mrs. Emma R. Blanchford of Altoona, presented the Bible to Mr. Geo. W. Arthurs for the Division. Mr. Leonard—for the ladies—delivered the following:

PRESENTATION ADDRESS.

We, the sisters of an Engineer, have read in his journals that you have become members of a society known as the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and that you have formed a Division in this city for the purpose of elevating yourselves morally and socially, as well as for making yourselves proficient in your occupation; and having noted with pleasure, in the Journal which is published by your Order, that the ladies not only contribute to its pages, but that some of the Divisions have been the recipients of marks of their favor, we have resolved that we will not be behind others in this respect. We see at our own homes that God is operating upon the hearts of the Engineers belonging to this Division, and we are glad to learn that over the whole line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Engineers are giving their hearts to God. May this great work not cease until every Engineer belonging to this honorable order has forsaken the path of error, and turned his feet to the testimony of the Word we now present you, for you know not what moment you may be cast into eternity, and while it is called to-day, all should prepare for a sudden change. We come this evening to decorate your altar, and present your Division with a copy of Harding's edition of the Holy Bible. As we know it is the great head-light of your most honorable Order, please accept from us this sacred volume, and may the word of God, as contained therein, be your guide to direct you to its Great Author, and as you have vowed may you have grace given to perform your vows to God and to each other. When you leave your homes to pursue your dangerous avocations, we can assure you that many anxious thoughts follow you and many prayers are offered up in your behalf. May he who guides the flight of the sparrow guide you also in your perilous journey. May you all remember that we are fast approaching our last resting-place, and when the terminus of our earthly pilgrimage is reached, may we all meet where parting is unknown. May the precepts of this most sacred book be ever fresh in the hearts and minds of the members of this Division, and may he who presides over this Division, guide it by the light of this Holy Bible, is the earnest prayer of the sisters of one of the Brotherhood.

The gift was accepted for the Division with the following

REMARKS BY MR ARTHURS.

In receiving this inestimable gift on behalf of Altoona Division, No. 44, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, I can only say that the precepts of our Order teach us that to do our duty as members, we must seek for counsel within this Holy Book. The principles of our Order are taken from it; our teachings, our charges, our mottoes, in fact all our objects and aims, radiate from one point, and that point is the great Head-light of Truth—the Holy Bible.

This being the case, it proves that these kind sisters could not have presented a gift to this Division that would have been more highly appreciated, or more fondly cherished by its members, than the one the teachings of their kind hearts prompted them to select; and for this act of kindness on their part, that tends so much towards the elevation of our Order, I can only add our assurance, that we will use our utmost endeavors to follow the precepts, and profit by the teachings contained within this copy of Holy Writ; so that when the busy cares of this world are over, we will be better prepared to meet those who by this kind act, have pointed out the path so plain, that leads to everlasting glory.

Please accept, through me, the warmest thanks of the members of this Division, for your great act of kindness in making so precious a gift. Now, may God bless you, dear sisters, is the earnest prayer of your friend and well-wisher.

Y. M. C. A SUPPER.—The members of the Young Men's Christian Association, (assisted by a number of ladies,) got up a supper for their benefit, in the Court House hall, on Friday and Saturday evenings last, and met with pecuniary success beyond their expectations. The weather on Friday evening was very inclement, but notwithstanding there was a good turn-out, and the supper was patronized to the extent of over $114. The weather on Saturday evening was much better, but the crowd was no greater. On both evenings the tables were spread with many delicacies that had been gratuitously furnished by many of our kind citizens, and invitingly arranged by the kind lady well-wishers of the Association. The thanks of the Association are tendered to them and to all who patronized them.

The following are the names of the "first-class" chequer-players in Bellefonte who want to get beaten by any of our Huntingdon players: D. G. Bush, Esq., J. S. Barnhart, Jonathan Harper, John G. Love, Esq., and Geo. O'Bryan. We hope G. W. G., T. C. F., or some more of our champions will "go for them."

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday last Samuel Snyder, an employee of the Matilda Iron Company, near Mount Union, while at work mining in a drift, a large rock, weighing about a ton, fell upon him from the top of the mine, causing his instant death. This is the third death at this mine within a month. Mr. Snyder leaves a family

Lewisburg, Centre and Spruce Creek Railroad.

A meeting of the friends of the Lewisburg, Centre and Spruce Creek Railroad was held at Spruce Creek on Wednesday, the 9th inst., and was organized by the election of Bucher Ayers, Esq., of Centre county, President, David Henderson and William B. McWilliams, vice Presidents and P. M. Lytle, Secretary. The President, after stating the object of meeting introduced Hon. George F. Miller, of Lewisburg, who, in an able address of some length, showed the importance of the road and the feasibility of the route over which it is proposed to be built. He produced estimates of its cost made by experienced engineers and demonstrated clearly that its completion at no distant day is beyond a doubt. Enough stock has already been subscribed to justify the commencement of the work.

The Penna. Railroad Company have caused to be made by persons appointed by them, a careful examination and survey of the whole route from Lewisburg to Spruce Creek, a distance of only seventy-five miles. A favorable report has been had and the company have offered to do more for the project than was asked or expected of them.

At the close of Mr. Miller's remarks R. Bruce Petrikin, Esq, was called upon and he responded in favor of the construction of the road. He spoke of the richness and beauty of the country through which it will pass and showed its importance, not only to those living on or near the route but the people of the State at large. He commended the energy of Mr. Miller in bringing the project to its present standing and urged those present to respond liberally by way of subscription.

The President then requested Mr. E. B. Isett to state what would be done for the road by certain wealthy citizens of Franklin township, who were not present at the meeting, but with whom he had conferred upon the subject.

Mr. Isett stated that he had from these gentlemen the most friendly assurances and expressed opinion that their subscriptions would be of the most liberal character. The books were then opened and a large amount was at once raised, there being two subscriptions amounting to $10,000.—A lively interest was manifested throughout, which with such a solid subscription made by such solid men, evinces with unerring certainty, the fact that the L. C. & S. C. R. R., is a reality, and that in a little while we shall be able to go by rail to Lewisburg via the beautiful and productive Spruce Creek and Penns Valleys in less than half the present distance.

ITEMS FROM JOHNSTOWN.—"Veritas" sends us the following news from Johnstown:

On the 12th inst., a gang of Harrisburg roughs made an assault on a Zouave company while at drill. A general row ensued, the Zouaves using their muskets, the Harrisburgers replying with steel knuckles. The roughs got the worst of it, and made rapid strides for the railroad station, and made their exit on the 5:18 train.

Robbery.—On the night of the 9th inst., the drug store of Mr. Reed was entered by burglars and robbed of $18 in money and about $30 worth of liquors. A grocery adjoining was also entered the same night and three dollars worth of flour stolen.

Fracas.—Two women were arrested on the night of the 12th for attempting to kill a man. The prisoners kept a house of ill repute, and the man had come there for the purpose of smashing things up, when one of them drew a pistol and fired at him three times, but was unsuccessful each time.

THE USE OF COAL OIL.—Those who use coal-oil lamps should always remember the following instructions, in compliance with which will save many accidents now daily occurring.

Fill your lamps by daylight, and keep them well cleansed.

Never burn a lamp when it is less than one-half full of oil.

Never fill a lamp near the fire.

Turn the wick low down before trying to blow the light out.

Keep your oil can in a cool place.—Coal oil is explosive when heated.

Don't let little children meddle with oil or lamp.

PAY AROUND THE CIRCLE.—There is a heap of good sense, and sound philosophy, in the following from the Galesburg, (Ill.) Free Press:

"Pay up. If you owe one but a single dollar, go and pay him; when there is so little money, we ought to keep it moving around lively. Jim owed us and we owed Bill and Bill owed Jim. Jim got mad because we made him pay last week one morning: but we paid Bill, and Bill paid Jim, and Jim went to bed that night happy as a clam, with just as much money as he had in the morning, and three men out of debt."

Sales.

Bills for the following sales have been printed at the Globe office:

March 8th, a valuable tract of land in Cromwell township, with improvements. See advertisement. John M. Querry, Ephraim Bowman, trustees of George Querry.

March 12th, sale at Mill Creek Furnace of horses, colts, harness, lumber, etc. See advertisement. J. M. Green.

MYSTERIOUS.—A small coffin was found behind a log near the narrows on the Iron Ridge road, in Rye township, Perry Co., a few days ago. The coffin was about 2½ feet long, and looked as if it had been in the woods for some time. The lid was split, as it had been broken open. There was no body in the coffin at the time it was found. It was a manufactory made coffin.—Juniata Republican.

HUNTINGDON, PA.

WHAT I KNOW OF FARMING.

BY HORACE GREELEY.

WHERE TO FARM.

When my father was over sixty years old, and had lived some twenty years in Erie county, Pennsylvania, he said to me: "I have several times removed, and always toward the West; I shall never remove again; but were I to do so, it would be toward the East. Experience has taught me that the advantages of every section are counterbalanced by disadvantages, and that, where any crop is easily produced, there it sells low, and sometimes cannot be sold at all. I shall live and die right here; but, were I to remove again, it would not be toward the West."

This is but one side of a truth, and I give it for whatever it may be worth. Had my father plunged into the primitive forest in his twenty fifth rather than his forty-fifth year, he would doubtless have become more reconciled to pioneer life than he ever did. I would advise no one over forty years of age to undertake with scanty means, to dig a farm out of the dense forest, where great trees must be cut down and cut up, rolled into log heaps and burned to ashes where they grew. Where half the timber can be sold for enough to pay the cost of cutting, the case is different; but I know right well that digging a farm out of the high woods is, to any but a man of wealth, a slow, hard task. Making one out of naked prairie, five or ten miles from timber, is less difficult, but not much. He who can locate where he has good timber on one side and rich prairie on the other is fortunate, and may hope, if his health be spared, to surround himself with every needed comfort within ten years. Still the pioneer's life is a rugged one, especially for women and children; and I should advise any man worth $2,000 and has a family, to buy out an "improvement" (which in most cases, badly needs improving) on the outskirts of civilization, rather than plunge into the pathless forest or push out upon the unbroken prairie. I rejoice that our Public Lands are free to actual settlers; I believe that many are thereby enabled to make for themselves homes who otherwise would have nothing to leave their children; yet I much prefer a location within the boundaries of civilization to one clearly beyond them. There is a class of drinking, hunting, frolicking, rarely working, frontiersmen, who seem to have been created on purpose to erect log cabins and break paths in advance of a different class of settlers, who regularly come in to buy them out and start them along after a few years. I should here prefer to follow rather than lead. If co-operation shall ever be successfully applied to the settlements of wild lands, I trust it may be otherwise.

He who has a farm already, and is content with it, has no reason to ask, "Whither shall I go?" and he may rest assured that thoroughly good farming will pay as well in New England as in Kansas or in Minnesota. I advise no man who has a good farm anywhere, and is able to keep it, to sell and emigrate. I know men who make money by growing food within twenty miles of this City quite as fast as they could in the West. If you have money to buy land and work it, and know how to make the most of it, I believe you may find land really as cheap all things considered, in Vermont as in Wisconsin or Arkansas.

And yet I believe in migration—believe that there are thousands, in the Eastern and Middle States who would improve their circumstances and prospects by migrating to the cheaper lands and broader opportunities of the West and South. For, in the first place, most men are by migration rendered more energetic and aspiring; thrown among strangers, they feel the necessity of exertion as they never felt it before. Needing almost everything, and obliged to rely wholly on themselves, they work in their new homes as they never did in their old; and the consequences are soon visible all round them.

"A stern chase is a long chase" say the sailors; and he who buys a farm mainly on credit, intending to pay for it out of its proceeds, finds interest, taxes, sickness, bad seasons, hail, frost, drouth, tornadoes, floods, &c., &c., deranging his calculations and impending his progress, until he is often impelled to give up in despair. There are men who can surmount every obstacle and defy discouragement—these need no advice; but there are thousands who, having little means and large families, can grow into a good farm more easily and far more surely than they can pay for it; and these may wisely seek homes where population is yet sparse and land is consequently cheap. Doubtless some migrate who might better have forborne yet the instinct which draws our race toward sunset is nevertheless a true one. The East will be depopulated; but the West will grow more rapidly in the course of the next twenty years than ever in the past. The Railroads which have brought Kansas and Minnesota within three days and California within a week of us, have rendered this inevitable.

But the South also invites immigration as they never did till now.—Her lands are still very cheap; she is better timbered, in the average, than the West; her climate invites; her unopened mines and unused water power call loudly for enterprise, labor and skill. It is absurd to insist that her soil is exhausted when not one-third of it has ever yet been plowed. I do not advise solitary migration to the South, because she needs schools, roads, bridges, mills, &c., &c., which the solitary immigrant can neither provide nor well do without; and I have no assurance that he, if obliged to work out for present bread, would find those ready to employ and willing to pay him; but let a hundred Northern farmers and mechanics worth $1,000 to $3,000 each combine to select (through chosen agents) and buy ten or twenty thousand acres in some Southern State, embracing hill and vale, timber, and tillage, water-power and minerals, and divide it equitably among themselves, after laying it out with roads, a park, a village-plat, sites for churches, schools, &c., and I am confident that they can thus make pleasant homes more cheaply and speedily there than almost anywhere else.

Good farming land improved or unimproved, is this day cheaper in the United States, all things considered, than in any other country—cheaper than it can long remain. So many are intent on short cuts to riches that the soil is generally neglected, and may be bought amazingly cheap in parts of Connecticut as well as in Iowa or Nebraska. When I was last in Illinois, I rode for some hours besides a gray-coated farmer of some 60 years, who told me this: "I came here thirty years ago, and took up at $1¼ per acre, a good tract of land, mainly in timber. I am now selling off the timber at $100 per acre, reserving the land." That seems to me a good operation—not so quick as a corner in the stock-market, but far safer. And while I would advise no man to incur debt, I say most earnestly to all who have means, "Look out the place where you would prefer to live and die; take time to suit yourself well; choose it with reference to your means, your calling, your expectations, and, if you can pay for it, buy. Do not imagine land is cheap in the West or the South only; it is to be found cheap in every State by those able to own and who know how to use it."—*N.
